A Resume Formatting Trick: Space Matters!

Here's how crowded bullets appear to the Admissions Office:

- Look how crowded I look in here. Gosh, there just isn't enough room for me to wiggle around in here. Can I go to the next line already?
- More crowded text. How can an admissions director get through this page? Are they even reading anymore? I think I see their eyes glazing over.
- Oh, no. There's more? My eyes hurt. Maybe I should go get another cup of coffee. I think I stopped reading a while ago but I can't even remember.
- Who was this guy? Did he have anything to say?

Now contrast that with this list of bullets with white space added:

- Look how much more space I have now. Gosh, I can really wiggle around in here now. There's lots being said in here.
- Here's some even more interesting material to read. Being an admissions director is one great job! I could spend all day reading documents like this.
- Yes! There's more! This guy has really been working hard and making an impact. I think we should invite him for an interview.
- I'm excited to read the rest of his application. Keep it coming!
